CE Regulation

Hereafter, we detail a short description about the additional and basic requirements established by the European regulations on safety footwear:

EN ISO 20344

This regulation defines the testing methods for occupational and safety footwear. It is used alongside the regulations EN ISO 20345 and EN ISO 20347, wherein the requirements that footwear must comply with according to the risk levels are detailed.

EN ISO 20345 | Specification for safety footwear

This international standard details the additional and basic requirements for safety footwear, including mechanical risks: safety toe designed to resist a maximum impact of 200J and crushing up to a force of 15 kN, slip resistance, thermal risks and ergonomic characteristics.

EN ISO 20347 | Specifications for work footwear

This international standard details the additional and basic requirements for occupational footwear that is not exposed to any mechanical risks (impact or compression).

SB 	Toe with impact resistance up to an energy equivalent to 200 J and compression force of 15 kN.

UNE-EN 61340-5-1 Electrostatic Protection

This type of footwear is used when it is necessary to minimize the risk of electrostatic charge build-up, allowing it to dissipate as quickly as possible. It is particularly suitable for use in environments where electronic control machinery or equipment is used and offers additional performance in conditions where electrical resistance is less than 100 kΩ.
